

SON OF ASSISTANT TREASURER BURIED FROM OLD HOME

Harold Bantz Is Carried to Last Resting Place by Former Associates.

The funeral of Harold Bantz, twenty-year-old son of Assistant Treasurer of the United States Gideon C. Bantz, who met an untimely death in Lima, N. M., from a fever contracted there, was held this afternoon from the residence of his parents, 1628 S. street northwest.

The young man's death came after an illness of about a month. At his request his father had obtained for him a summer position in the Forestry Service, it being his wish to spend the summer in the open. He was in the service when stricken in New Mexico. At first his condition was not regarded as serious, and at one time it was reported he would leave for home within the next few days.

As soon as the father learned his son's condition was serious he hurried to the New Mexico village. He arrived just a few moments too late. The son died while his father was hastening from the station to the hospital.

Mr. Bantz left New Mexico with the body last Thursday, arriving in Washington yesterday morning. At the funeral this afternoon the Rev. C. Ernest Smith, of St. Thomas' Church, officiated. The pallbearers were selected from the young man's associates. They were Paul Bushnell, William Ellis, Curtis Walker, Harry Blanton, Alfred Thompson, William Upson, Arthur Dowell, and Alfred Hayden. Mr. Hayden is a student in Virginia Military Institute and obtained a leave of absence to attend the funeral. Young Bantz had expected to enter this fall into the senior class in Stevens Institute of Technology, Hoboken, N. J. The interment was private.

He had no relatives in Washington, and his friends are making efforts to raise money to meet the funeral expenses.

JOHN W. RHODES.

John W. Rhodes, a Confederate drummer boy during the '60's, and for more than twenty years a clerk in the Police Court, was buried this afternoon in Rock Creek Cemetery. ## Baby would cry all night with itching

Face a mass of sores—Resinol cured

Philadelphia, Pa., July 26, 1912
"My baby's trouble first started on his cheek in little pimples. It spread all over his face till he was a mass of thick sores. It would itch him so he would scratch it till it would bleed, and his pillow and nightgown would be a mass of blood in the morning. He would cry all night. This lasted about three months. I sent for samples of Resinol Soap and Resinol Ointment, and when I put them on they seemed to ease him, so I bought a fifty-cent jar of Resinol Ointment, and before I used it all his face was cured." (Signed) Mrs. Hartzell, 1820 Oakdale Street.

Trial free: Resinol Soap (50c) and Resinol Ointment (50c and $1) are invaluable household remedies for skin troubles: pimples, dandruff, sores, burns and piles. Your druggist sells them, but for free samples, send address to Dept. S-A, Resinol Sales Co., Baltimore, Md.

Rainey Hunt Pictures On For the Last Week

The Rainey African Hunt pictures, which are being shown for the last week in Washington, still continue to draw delighted crowds to the Belasco Theater every afternoon and evening. These pictures depict the dangers and interesting episodes that were encountered by the young Cleveland millionaire in his hunt through the heart of Africa, and vividly depict the remarkable scenes that are to be found only in this hitherto unexplored portion of the world. The trapping and killing of a lion is one of the most remarkable of the hundreds of pictures that are shown upon the screen. The movement of the Mississippi hounds as they rush upon their prey after they have succeeded in running him to ambush, is as exciting as it is unusual.

The wonderfully realistic scene at the desert water hole, the charming little domestic episodes in the elephant family, the marvelous gathering of birds and beasts at this one fertile spot in an arid desert, are shown in a series of pictures that are worth the attention of everybody. During the entire time that the pictures are being shown an explanatory lecture by Reginald Carrington adds interest to the entertainment.

Heart to Heart Talks

BY THE EDITOR OF THE CAVALIER

H ASEN't this been a fierce summer? Rain, wind, soggy woodlands and weeping willows. A man might just as well have taken his vacation under a fish-dock as any other place.

Do not get the impression that I am irritable; I'm not. But I do not mind transmitting to you the information that it is no fun to pack a trunk full of summer togs, flannel trousers, near-silk socks, and nobby neckties, and wind up in a Hudson Bay post pricing a rubber blanket, a Mackinaw coat, and a pair of gum boots.

Another thing: Frank O'Brien is confined to his bed in Smithtown, Long Island, with the comforting assurance from his medical adviser that he will be on his back two weeks yet; Frank Condon is hibernating in Wisconsin, Maine; Paul West has quit writing verses while he chaps some fire-wood; Strickland Gillilan says that the poem entitled "Microbes; Adam had 'em" (that's all there was to it, which appeared in the "Heart to Heart Talks" of July, 1912, was swiped from him—which it was; and altogether I am up against it.

The fact of the matter is, the microbes poem of Mr. Gillilan's is the best thing he ever wrote. The only thing he could possibly write that would beat it would be something shorter.

But as far as you have gone, Strickland, you are the best in the business, and the reason I didn't give you credit for the poem in the first place was because in going the rounds of the poem, your brother confederate extended to your absolute extinction.

Permit me to put you back on the map again before five hundred thousand Americans people. If you will wait until the first of the year, I shall make it a million, or a year from now—

Oh, let's not back to the present and this number of THE CAVALIER, and

"SCHOOLMA'AM ISLAND"

By BAILEY MILLARD

a complete novel which we are putting over all in one number. It is a combination of laughter and thrills. You cannot help but be amused at the complications which arise after the week, when a bunch of charming school-teachers are hurled from the happy deep to the dry sands under the protection of an perfectly good American citizen and a South Sea island king.

It is a complete novel which we are putting over all in one number. It is a combination of laughter and thrills. You cannot help but be amused at the complications which arise after the week, when a bunch of charming school-teachers are hurled from the happy deep to the dry sands under the protection of an perfectly good American citizen and a South Sea island king. Bailey Millard is to be congratulated on the number of effective scenes and incidents he has crowded into "SCHOOLMA'AM ISLAND." It never lags for a moment. You will stop from sensation to sensation with the rushing of a man running down stairs—or up stairs, as the case may be.

The love story which is the largest part of "SCHOOLMA'AM ISLAND" is of the exhilarating sort, and when adventure appears it steps right into the middle of the scene.

I need no know a man out west who was an actor in telling funny stories. It was his habit, however, to make any gentleman, however, hysterical over his yarns, to kick him violently. He did not believe in continued mirth in anybody. Bailey Millard is not quite as rough as my western friend, but he is every bit as active.

"SCHOOLMA'AM ISLAND" will give you a day of genuine pleasure.

CAMERON LOCKWOOD, in a story entitled "WHERE THE TELEVISION BREAK IN," has done about the best job of the sort that ever crossed our desk.

It really takes a great deal of experience to be a competent, painstaking, first-class writer. Lots of men have tried to be the kind of man who ought to be counting broken at a seaside resort. A low-brow can never be a high-class criminal. When a man sets out to take something that does not belong to him, that is the best indication in the world that he is a low-brow at the outset, but if he gets away with it, he is an artist, unless, of course, the constabulary, which is not as artistic as it might be, stumbles him up in the gray stone front, where all men are equal—in their guilt.

To anybody who is about to reach out and take some other man's property, Mr. Lockwood's story will come as a shock—a half-raising paralyzing, stupefying wallop. It is a very bad story for a kleptomaniac to pick up and read, but it will do an honest man good. It will show him how many great temptations he has overcome. It will make him like himself, especially his powers of resistance. I cannot recommend this story too highly. It is a good plot, good reading, and good writing.

"LOVE THAT PASSES UNDERSTANDING" By ADRIANA SPADONI

This is pitched in quite a different key than Mr. Lockwood's yarn. It is a simple plot—so simple that it seems almost inadequate to justify a 1000-word story. Yet Miss Spadoni has handled the theme so artfully and touched it with such skillful fingers that she has wrung from it a new chord. Read the scenario:

A woman, burdened with a husband who is worthless, falls in love with another who is a man in every way worthy of every fine feeling that is born in a woman's breast. The wife is crushed between a sense of duty and a wild longing to take the happiness within reach. To her mother she pours out all that she feels in a torrent of emotion.

Well, we may as well admit it here as anywhere that the mother understands her daughter's mind better than any one else in the world. Why? For simple reasons. And to make matters more interesting still, the mother knows that the inevitable is not far off. How truly she understood will be made plain to you when you read "LOVE THAT PASSES UNDERSTANDING."

This is the first contribution we have had from Adriana Spadoni. Be assured it is not the last.

"GETTING BILLY'S GOAT," by Jack Brant: A football story. There is a man who can play a wonderful game of football, but who doesn't simply because he never gets mad enough to make himself felt in the game. The captain and the coach conspire to get him in a frenzy at

"THE SHADOW," Arthur Stringer's new serial, which lays bare the tactics of the metropolitan police, is making a sensation. We can supply back numbers to those who were not fortunate enough to read the first instalment.

There are other short stories in this number, any one of which is worth the price of the magazine.

Also, the second instalment of "A SINISTER SOUVENIR," the great mystery collaboration of Edgar Franklin and Gilbert Riddell, will be found. These two popular authors are always effective, alone or in pairs.
